Este libro y su título contraparte, Atlas of Urban Expansion, desarrollan una ciencia de ciudades globales a fin de preparar para la próxima expansión de la población urbana del planeta. Según estimaciones de la ONU, para el año 2050 la población urbana casi duplicará, llegando a 6 mil millones de personas. El autor cuestiona los principios centrales del Paradigma de Contención en un contexto mundial, y demuestra cómo el crecimiento inteligente y la gestión del crecimiento urbano abordan de forma inadecuada las preguntas centrales que enfrentan las ciudades en expansión fuera de Estados Unidos y Europa, especialmente en Asia y África. El libro proporciona el marco conceptual, los datos básicos empíricos, y la agenda práctica necesaria para la gestión mínima, pero significativa, del proceso de expansión urbana.

Publicado por el Lincoln Institute of Land Policy en colaboración con la Universidad del Rosario, Colombia.
